The past one year of my tenure as Governor of this beautiful and progressive State has been quite enlightening and useful.

2. I am very proud to state that my Government has sincerely and purposefully implemented the policies and programmes to which I had given special stress in my last address, for the upliftment of the poorer sections of the society and to bring in a satisfactory standard of living to the people of the State. Particularly those who live in villages. My Government believes that the welfare of the people of the State and their social, cultural and economic development depends mainly on the development of the rural areas and on the social and cultural awakening of the rural people. It is with this knowledge that my Government's policies and programmes are primarily oriented to the said sections of the society, which constitute a majority of the State's population.

3. The general elections to the Tenth Loksabha were held in by and large a very peaceful atmosphere and we have presently a stable Government under the able and experienced leadership of Shri P.V. Narasimha Rao. The Country has once again demonstrated its maturity in parlimentary democracy. However, we are shaken by the untimely and tragic demise of our dynamic and beloved leader Shri Rajiv Gandhi, in the midst of general elections.

4. During the last year, the State has experienced heavy rainfall and loss of property in floods in some parts and drought conditions in few other areas. My Government has taken action to provide relief to the flood victims and reconstruct damaged houses belonging to economically weaker sections of the society and has undertaken adequate relief works in the drought affected areas.
